

TRANSCRIPT CROMWELL/091825-03

This transcript was automatically produced by an internal Ethics Committee Class-I Reactive Intelligence.

Participants:

- Lieutenant Simon Cromwell | Ethics Committee Junior Supervisor
- Lieutenant Sandra Verlice | Ethics Committee Junior Supervisor

[BEGIN LOG]

(A man and a woman are seated at a table within the Ethics Committee Headquarters' mess hall.)

Verlice: How's your team going?

Cromwell: Assigned to me a few days ago. They found something pretty cool. I have a meeting with Langford later this afternoon. You?

Verlice: Responding to reports, digging through the Deepwell, you know how it is.

Cromwell: Which Deepwell branch are they working on?

Verlice: We're on Site-120's Deepwell. It's not really anything exciting, most of it is in Polish.

Cromwell: Right.

(Cromwell takes a bite out of a cheeseburger.)

Verlice: You alright?

Cromwell: No, yeah, I'm fine.

Verlice: People who are fine don't eat a cheeseburger like that.

(A momentary pause. Cromwell looks at Verlice, then at his cheeseburger, then at her again.)

Cromwell: What?

Verlice: We've known each other for how long now? I can tell something's up.

Cromwell: No it's just... I'm assigned to the Site-17 Deepwell. And you know how that place is. I haven't received anything, nor found anything. Can you believe that? You hear all these horror stories about 17 and I'm here not seeing anything...

Also what do you mean that's not how you eat a cheeseburger?

Verlice: Look, listen, you're still new here.

Cromwell: I was made Junior Supervisor 3 days after you.

Verlice: What difference does that make? We're still new here. Maybe we're seeing nothing because nothing has happened yet since we got here. Besides, isn't it good that nothing's happening?

Cromwell: Doesn't it seem like nobody's paying attention? Where were you 5 days ago?

[END LOG]